Help

Read the following excerpt (/c4x/LouvainX/Louv2.01x/asset/_Materials__Casebook_583-596.pdf) of the International Human Rights Law casebook (pp. 583-596). Once you have been through this excerpt, think about the similarities and differences that exist between the four cases referred to above – the 'Prague Airport' case presented to the House of Lords, the Williams case presented to the Human Rights Committee, the Timishev case before the European Court of Human Rights, and the Rasterfahndung operation practised by the German authorities after 9/11. From the point of view of the search for solutions to combat ethnic profiling, does it matter whether these different forms of ethnic profiling are either formalized or informal? Whether they proceed by automated means or not?

In order to avoid ethnic profiling, should the prohibition of processing personal data related to race or ethnicity be strengthened, or would this instead make it even more difficult to identify instances of profiling?

Please contribute to the debate on this question.
